Chapter: The Community

Establishing Integrity

Excerpt from: Sunlight On Water: A Manual for Soul-Full Living
by Flo Magdalena of SoulSupportSystems.org

Right now, you are establishing integrity. And it may take ten times longer the first time to establish that integrity. So what? Because if you don't establish the integrity, it won't hold together. You are building bridges between the old and the new, which means you want to preserve the things that function well from the old paradigm, and use the new paradigm to accelerate the momentum. So the energy, the funding, the capacity, are all there before you even begin it. You know that, so you are not worried about those things. What you're logically setting down are your points of foundation. They may be people, process, proposals, connections, junctions, linkages, or bridges. Whatever they are, they have to be covered before you'll feel comfortable.

So anything that you begin, if you feel uncomfortable about it, say, "Wait a minute, we need another foundation point here. What is it?" First you open to get your holographic picture, and then you start plotting. Plot it circularly, that's fine. And when you're finished plotting it, say, "All right, does it feel complete?" And it may not feel complete. The part of you that is going to let you know it's complete or not, believe it or not, is the logical part. You're learning to see it holographically and open out to it, so that the whole picture is always present. Then the logic can do the details. But you're always in the creative mode, and that is a marriage.

Before one can marry those components, one must honor ALL the parts of the self. So you see, we keep coming back to the individuation. Because if you want to act holographically, all the parts of the self have to be married. And you're learning to do that now. All of you are learning to marry those parts. You're learning to marry your power and your gentleness, and your force and your trajectories, with your open expansions. And you're learning to marry your logic with your absolute. It is really a training ground. And what you train to do in this year is going to be your curriculum for next year, because you're going to go ahead of the crowd and be on the edge of the wave. And people will come and participate in the wave. By the end of this year, you're going to have a sense of what it's like to be in community.

Make sure that you each take care of your honoring first. If you don't do that, the community is going to feel it. Because if one person does not honor himself or herself in the community, it will become a community issue. So instead of creating all that could be created, there will be a consensus that he or she will have to be dealt with in a way by the whole community. And that's the old paradigm - that the community is there to support you, because you don't have what you need in your life. If you make a community that is based like that, then it's going to take a lot more energy & time to create. Creation and survival are dichotomies, as you know. If you are worried about surviving, then the honoring is taken away from the self, because the self does not believe in its own ability to create. So that's why we are making this distinction from the "get-go." We are creating a consciousness with you. The first sentence we stated is what you want to remember - we welcome you to this place. THIS place is what you have come to create on Earth.
